J. M. Withrow Named Eagles' Successor

John McClellan Withrow has been appointed by Cone Mills Inc. to handle industrial fabrics merchandising for the Dwight Division of Cone Mills Corporation. He succeeds R. P. M. Eagles, whose assistant he was until Mr. Eagles' recent death, and will make his headquarters in the New York Office of Cone Mills Inc.

Mr. Withrow is a graduate of Williams College. He started in the textile bag business in 1918 with the Riegel Sack Company of New York in a sales and manufacturing capacity. In 1923, he became general manager in charge of manufacturing for this firm.

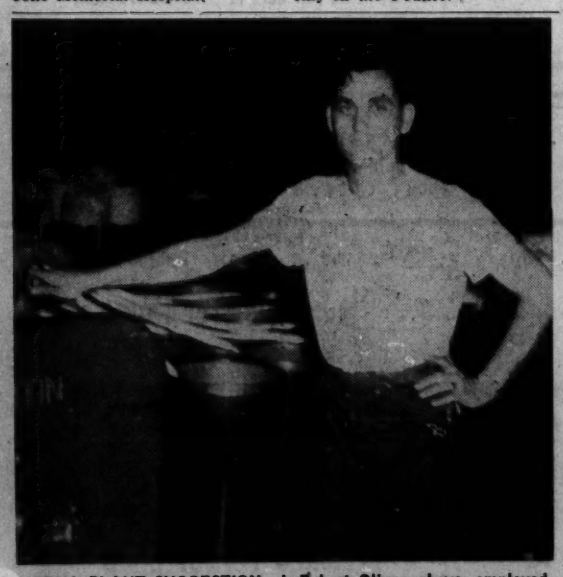
Daniel V. Eberhard was named assistant to Mr. Withrow. He was an assistant in the merchandising department of Cone's Dwight grey mill.

Mr. Eberhard's first position in the textile field was in the accounting department of the Dwight Manufacturing Company's New York Office in 1929.

Cone Mills Offering Attractive New Shade Of Deeptone Denim

A distinctive new shade of deeptone brown denim is now being offered to the trade by Cone Mills, following a short period of evaluation and market tests in key selling areas, it was announced last Monday.

The new denim is described as identical with the 8-ounce sanforized Cone deeptone denim except in color, which is a sulphur brown. In addition to possessing unusual eye appeal, this denim innovation recommends itself to mothers because the color naturally conceals dust and dirt. The deeptone brown shade is priced at 45 cents a yard, thus carrying a 5 cents premium over the blue 28" 8-ounce sanforized. The new fabric is being made only in the 8-ounce.



EDNA PLANT SUGGESTION—J. Robert Oliver, above, employed at Edna Plant, Reidsville, suggested that a piece of metal be welded across the ends of the shipper fork on the drawing frames. This is to keep the belt from slipping. Mr. Oliver received a cash award from Cone Mills Corporation for his idea.

Camp Herman Offers Varied Program

Part of the activities to be offered at Camp Herman for families opening June 28 include: Swimming, boating, canoeing, badminton, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, miniature golf, movies, television, stunt night, watermelon slicing, horseshoes and square dancing.

The Cone YMCA wishes to announce that swimming will be allowed at Camp Herman at Louise Park only, starting Saturday, June 7, and Sunday, June 8. The swimming schedule will be as follows:

Sat., June 6—12:30 to 5:30 p.m.
Sun., June 7— 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.
Sat., June 13—12:30 to 5:30 p.m.
Sun., June 14— 1:00 to 5:30 p.m.
Sat., June 20—12:30 to 5:30 p.m.
Sun., June 21— 1:00 to 5:30 p.m.

The YMCA staff, all water safety instructors in both Red Cross and YMCA programs, will serve as life guards on respective dates. Only Cone Mills employees and their dependents are eligible for this privilege and they are asked to please observe the dates and time listed above—swimming will not be permitted at other times.

Louise Park will be opened daily starting June 28. No permits will be necessary for swimming privileges, but permits must be secured for fishing privileges. These permits are issued at both YMCA's upon request.

Swimmers are urged to use common sense rules of swimming safely—obey life guards at all times; never swim alone; know your swimming limitations; never dive in unfamiliar water; no "horseplay"; don't stay in the sun too long; learn to swim.

Textorian Mgr. Views Pre-Coronation London

After hitting the high spots in six European countries, I had the privilege last week of winding up my trip abroad in the same city in which I had begun it a month before. That city, London, is the one upon which the eyes of the whole world have been focused this week, because it is the coronation seat of the oldest surviving monarchy in the world, Great Britain.

Although to most Britishers, I committed the prime mistake of leaving five days too early, I was not as distressed as they when I learned, upon arrival on the Queen Elizabeth in New York on Coronation Day, that 4,141 had been hurt in the crowds around Westminster Abbey and that the pagentry had been dampened by rain.

The visit to London last week gave a good taste of the excitement and anticipation which was to accompany the ancient and colorful ritual of crowning the 27-year-old Elizabeth II, Queen of the Realm.

For the past several months, everything in London had carried the Coronation theme. Every building along the Coronation route had been decorated in regal trappings, most of them using a huge gold crown with the letters E II R. (meaning, of course, Elizabeth II, Regina.)

The most elegant and tasteful decorations were seen naturally on Bond, Regent, and Oxford Streets and Picadilly Circus, as well as along Whitehall and the Mall.

Most outstanding decor is at Selfridge's Department Store. Mounted high above the entrance is an equestrian statue of the Queen copied from the well-known photograph of her as she reviewed the trooping of the colors. Flanking the statue, all along the wide front of the building, are huge pictures depicting British industries of the first Elizabethan age and of this.

Four tremendous arches span the Mall. Each arch, 65 ft. high, has twin spans and is topped by two lions and two unicorns in steel tubing and wire mesh, adding 20 feet to the height of the arrangement. Suspended on gold wires from the center of each arch is a huge gold Princess' coronet. These are illuminated at night. The lions atop these arches are for all the world like trapese artists ready to leap at command.

Each street follows a particular pattern in its decoration, all using the crown and royal colors.

Fleet Street, the street of journalism, awoke one morning to find a long archway of white festoons sweeping down from both sides of the street from Long-Live-the-Queen banners which had been put up during the night.

Londoners themselves found it difficult to recognize old landmarks, so long anticipated by tourists. Everything along the route of the parade was literally transformed by wooden bleachers on iron scaffolding. The front of the stands had been covered in light blue linen-like fabric.

Chief of my surprises was the way in which they had literally obscured their revered Westminster Abbey. Covered grandstands bearing various royal coats of arms in the inner ceiling surround the Abbey on both sides. Outside the west door of the Abbey, they had constructed a very modern looking temporary Royal Annexe where the Queen alighted after her ride from Buckingham Palace. It is in this annex, that the high and mighty of the realm adjusted their coronets and regal robes before their grand entries into the sacred nave. It was here also that the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh had a short luncheon following the coronation ceremonies, which lasted about two and a half hours.

No tourist had been admitted into the Abbey since January 1, a most disappointing thing to me, since for many years I had looked forward to viewing St. Edward's chair, the Stone of Scone and Poet's Corner.

This closure was on account of vast construction of seats inside the Abbey for the comparatively lucky few who, by royal birth, gained admittance. A great deal of other work had to be done since the scene of the crowning was also the scene of the most spectacular television drama ever to be witnessed.

Not only is London Coronation-happy with regard to decorations, but with regard to its current dramas. A very good modern play which has run about a year at a Picadilly Circus theater is entitled "The Young Elizabeth" and depicts some of the turmoils of the first Elizabeth's youth. I saw this play upon my first visit to London.

On my last night, I had the treat of seeing the Old Vic players do Shakespeare's "Henry VIII," and that they did superbly. Since the play contains a delicious scene of two comics observing a coronation parade and since it ends with the Christening of the first Elizabeth and predictions for her reign, this drama is quite apropos.

On board the Queen Elizabeth on Coronation eve, after a special Coronation dinner, we saw the American film, "Young Bess," which again delves back to the first Queen Elizabeth's days.

Religious life in London, and throughout all of England for that matter, has been centered on the Coronation for some time. I attended a Sunday evening service a month ago in St. Margaret's Westminster. This chapel or church adjoins the Abbey and has been completely obscured by the scaffolding. It was not open to tourists at this time, but since I went as a worshipper how could I be turned away.

The rector used for his text the line from Exodus: "What mean ye by this service?" He then set about to explain the spiritual and religious connotations of the coronation ritual, emphasizing, of course, that the Queen dedicates herself to service of God and her subjects.

Every tiny burough and county in the British Isles is reported by Welsh, Irish and Scots on board our ship to have adorned itself with flags, streamers and photographs of the Queen and her handsome duke.

In their own simple and sometimes gaudy way, these small towns have paid their tribute which is just as acceptable in the royal eye as the more elegant decorations along London's best streets.

On the way to Stratford, Windsor and Canterbury I saw many of these small-town contributions to the festive season. Among the most ludricrous was a boarded up type of eating establishment which obviously had never been painted and bore huge colored photographs of the Queen and Duke framed in huge gilt frames. A sign just above the royal heads read "Eels and Pie." Another highly decorated building included a window with the sign, "Old False Teeth Bought Here."

Probably just as comical to the British was my entry in the fancy hat contest one night aboard the Queen Elizabeth. My steward and my cabin mate are due most of the credit, even though I furnished most of the materials and did the modeling in the ballroom before several hundred passengers. It was the steward's idea that I wear a box covered in a purple scarf to look like a royal table topped with a tiny sherry bottle and wine glass and bearing the sign "A Toast to the Queen." Needless to say, next day, when he learned that I did not win, he was crestfallen. I was the only entry of more than 50 who had used the Coronation theme, such as it was, and as an Englishman, he just couldn't figure out that one.

The average Englishman goes simply mad when he glimpses a member of the royal family and centers all of his hopes, aspirations and national affection on the reigning monarch, but all do not have this reaction.

I visited Hyde Park on a Sunday night. This area is known as the "Lungs of London," because anybody and everybody can make a soap box speech on anything and everything. I heard some discounting the money spent for the Coronation decorations and some discounting the money spent for the monarchy in general. Arguments against these comments were usually in the majority.

While reading a plea for funds to restore the Abbey from decay,

Textiles Course Offered To Student Employees

For the second consecutive summer, Cone Mills' "school boys" and "school girls" will be offered a short summer explanatory course, beginning as nearly as possible where last summer's course ended. It will last six weeks, beginning June 16 and 17 and ending just before the Greensboro plants close for vacation.

Last summer 21 student employees completed the course which was devoted largely to textile manufacturing. This year's classes will hear and see explanations of textile bleaching, dyeing, and various finishing processes, and will visit plant departments to see these processes carried out. They will learn something about the many fields in the textile industry and get some idea of the skills and knowledge required. They will also learn about Cone products and where they are made and will visit several of the plants.

Each student employee will receive a letter telling him or her about the course and inviting him to enroll. Herman J. Lackey, second shift overseer of dyeing and finishing at Proximity Plant, will teach the second shift (morning) class, while Julius "Dude" Pickard, assistant overseer of dyeing at White Oak Plant, will teach the first shift class.

Day Camp To Offer Worthwhile Activities

How Come?

The problems in Korea are rapidly becoming more complicated. Regardless of whether some sort of a basis for a truce is established, it is quite certain that all will not be well in that badly harassed country.

At no time could it be truly said that a civil war between the South and North Koreans existed. The issues involved were generated beyond the borders of Korea. Yet, at this stage of the development we recognize the element of patriotic nationalism in South Korea ready to assert itself in no uncertain manner.

It is true that the South Koreans have fought and suffered since the beginning of the war. It is likewise a fact that those same people have sacrificed for definite principles; but all through the hostilities they have felt that the United Nations were supporting them and fighting with them for those same principles.

There is little wonder that the South Koreans are now very much disturbed and puzzled. They feel, rightfully or wrongfully, that they are being ignored and that those same principles are being abandoned.

It is difficult to judge what the true facts are. It is equally as difficult to guess what a truce according to the new United Nations formula may lead to if accepted.

In many quarters it is thought that the ultimate results of such a truce would mean that Communist China would have won the war. If that should happen to be the case, it would add up that the United Nations together with the South Koreans lost. It would also mean that Communist Russia could cut another notch.

It is too early to hazard a guess as to whether fighting would actually cease. If a truce is developed through present negotiations and the South Koreans continue to fight, would they have to do it without our material and other help? If so, there is little doubt but that they would be overrun by the Communists within a short period of time.

If they do continue to fight with our support, we would still be involved in the war, and although our troops might not actually participate we would continue to be sitting on a keg of dynamite.

We are not ready to criticize the Administration's leadership or to say Amen to Senator Taft's recent outburst, but we are wondering to what extent Britain's need for world trade is affecting the present turn of events.

Not only do the courageous people in South Korea have the right to be puzzled, but in our book a lot of American citizens who have borne a great burden in blood, tears and sacrifice, have the right to ask "how come?"

Pythian Echoes

by R. Cole Lee

Delegates to the Grand Lodge of North Carolina representing the Cone Pythian Lodge are Millard Leonard, V. O. Watson, Lee Clapp, Louis Tweedell, G. C. Cole, L. J. Bumgarner, Jesse Wheeler, C. V. Webster and myself. This annual convention will be held June 9 at Sir Raleigh Hotel and is expected to bring forth plans and ideas that will have a far-reaching effect upon Pythianism in the State.

The monthly D.O.K.K. meeting will be held after the Grand Lodge on the evening of June 16. This session will see the final touches for the District Ceremonial to be held July 7, at which time we shall have the pleasure of hearing our Imperial Basha, John M. Lawrence of Oklahoma City. It is hoped that the membership will keep in mind the above dates and thus have an excellent turn out.

The committee for the nominating of officers for the next term of office was appointed by the chancellor commander as follows: T. G. Watkins, chairman, Louis Tweedell and Woodrow Martin. All right boys, let's see what you can bring forth in the way of live wires.

Although many months premature, nevertheless I wish to call attention to the Pythian Bowl Game. This year the Pythian Bowl football game will be played at Roanoke on October 31 between Emory and Henry College and Lenoir-Rhyne College. Contracts for these teams have been signed with the States of North Carolina and Virginia Knights of Pythias as sponsors. Both of these schools have excellent football teams and we are expecting a real game. Mark this date down now while you are thinking about it and make such that this is a "must date."

I have received word that the furnace fund for the Pythian Home at Clayton from the local Lodge has risen to $343.00. It is hoped that by the time the Grand Lodge meets our membership will have contributed the sum of $400.00. Somehow I believe this will be done as many others have sent in word that they wanted and are going to contribute. Send your gifts to city father, W. B. Burke.

LISTEN AMERICANS!

...by George S. Benson

President of Harding College

WASHINGTON—If you want to draw a picture of the person in America most effectively blocking the approach to a balanced budget in the near future, you should take your pen and ink and sketch a man's head with two faces, one looking east and the other west. Out of one mouth, your sketch should show the man shouting: "Save!" Out of the other mouth, he would be shouting with equal vigor: "Spend!"

During the last three months I have spent considerable time in Washington interviewing cabinet members and key people in Congress. It is my conviction that there is a strong determination among the present leadership of our national government, in both the executive and legislative branches, to drastically cut down on its size, its power and its cost in tax dollars. But there is no certainty at all that it will be done.

Groups of people who constitute only a small portion of our citizenry but who are politically vocal and active are sending delegations to the White House and to the Senate and House office buildings insistently urging that there be "No cut!" in the appropriations for their pet projects.

The representatives and senators I visited showed me piles of letters from the "folks back home" gently or firmly pressuring for such things as restoration of the cut in Agriculture Department funds for soil conservation payments; restoration of the proposed $50-million air base near such-and-such-a-place which had been trimmed out of the defense budget; restoration of the appropriation for "So-and-So" Dam on "So-and-So" River; restoration of numerous government jobs recently eliminated as an economy move—and so forth.

The special pleading groups do not constitute a powerful mass of deliverable votes, but they are vocal, and active, and they are insistently, constantly in contact with their congressmen and congressional committees, putting on the pressure. They have a way of presenting their appeal as if they were representing a whole state, or region, or even the majority of the people of the nation.

"Will you be able to drastically cut the budget?" I asked a senator friend. He replied thoughtfully: "Not unless public opinion can make itself heard in Washington above the demands of the groups who are coming here asking special consideration for all the things we're trying to economize on. There simply cannot be any genuine economies without a lot of groups and a lot of individuals having to make a small sacrifice in the national interest—in the interest of their own long-range personal welfare."

Are you a part of public opinion? Are you being heard in Washington? Or don't you pay taxes!

Little Talks with Big Thoughts

As I came into the house, after a long hard journey through heavy traffic, someone remarked: "Aren't you ever nervous or frightened in such traffic?" "How is it, in all the years you have been driving, you have never had a bad accident?"

I hesitated for a moment to answer, from the embarrassment of revealing my inward treasured feelings. Then I said, "There isn't any secret to my driving. I simply say each day, when I get into my car, 'Dear God, take the wheel with me, that I may drive wisely and carefully; that I may harm no one or anything; and that I may finish my journey safely.'"

Yes, I have been in many precarious driving spots, but my Driving Partner has given me the wisdom at the right moment to do the right thing.

Health For All

Use Your Head, Save Your Feet

Your back aches, or you have a headache. Or you are tired all the time. You may find it hard to believe, but the cause of your woes may be your feet.

Most of us walk without thinking about it. If we drove our cars the same way, we would expect the accident rate to soar. We can save ourselves a lot of grief if we give a little thought to the way we use our feet.

The importance of the foot, on which the whole body structure depends, does not lie in its shape but in the way it is used. If we walk properly, the arch and supporting muscles and bones carry our weight evenly and easily. However, if we walk so that the weight presses off center, on the inner side of the foot for example, the pivot of the foot will shift position and cause severe pain. The pressure may eventually result in weak, painful flat feet, and a shuffling uncomfortable gait.

The end results are often backache, short temper, and headache. Both prevention and correction of the trouble must begin in the head. If you have flat feet, you must consciously try to stand and to walk with your feet parallel, the toes turning neither in or out. Think while you walk. Be sure to bring your feet down on the ground with the whole sole touching, instead of banging down the heel first. In this way the muscles wil be strengthened to support the arch and maintain the proper position of the foot.

If voluntary exercises do not correct the difficulty, your doctor may prescribe an artificial support for the foot.

Social Security Card Is Very Important

"If you have lost your Social Security card and have not applied for a duplicate, you may be doing a grave injustice to your family," W. L. O'Brien, manager of the Greensboro Social Security office, said today. "In the event of a worker's death, his family should know his Social Security number, or in the event a worker changes jobs, his new employer will need a record of his name and Social Security number as shown on his Social Security card.

"In the event that a worker fails to show his employer his Social Security card, his family may suffer both a loss and a delay of benefits. Wages reported without a Social Security number may not be credited to the worker's account. Thus, by seeing to it that his employer is reporting his wages under his correct name and Social Security number, the worker renders a considerable service to himself and his family.

"The true value of a deceased worker's Social Security account to his family is, of course, the amount of insurance benefits that may be paid. How soon the payment of these benefits can be made is also important, as most families, upon the death of the 'breadwinner,' find themselves in immediate need of funds. The amount that is payable to the worker's family is based on the record of wages earned by the worker. If all wages are reported under the correct name and Social Security number of the worker, his family may expect to receive prompt payment of all Social Security insurance benefits to which they are entitled," O'Brien said.

Textile Industry Cited As Example Of Free Enterprise

The textile industry "more closely exemplifies the wholesome results of free enterprise and individual effort than any other single industry," one of the nation's best-known textile executives declared recently.

Charles C. Hertwig of Macon, immediate past president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute, said the textile industry exmplifies "that philosophy which is abhorent to what we term as left-wing liberal thinkers." Because that is so, he added, "it has been subjected at times, to attacks from radical sources.

"The very fact that we have been so attacked, he said, "is evidence that we stand for the principles of justice and freedom and the right of the individual to advance himself by the application of work, intelligence and ingenuity."

Mr. Hertwig characterized textiles as the basic industry upon which the other major developments in the South have been built. Tracing the development of textile mills in the region, he stated: "The fact that we here in the South were willing to buy new machinery rather than paying all our money out in dividends is the largest reason" for the industry's strong position in the region today.

The textile industry, the speaker continued, not only is the largest employer in Georgia and brings in substantially half the income from nondurable goods made in the state, but it has encouraged the establishment of numerous other industries within Georgia and the Southeast.

He pointed out that the iron and steel industries supply the textile mills with materials for machinery and numerous other products which are a part of their operation. The chemical industry in the region has been growing rapidly because of the large consumption of chemicals by mills. The mills are tremendous users of oils, gas and electricity and have encouraged the power companies to so expand their operations as to take care of the needs of other industries which are moving to the area. He said that at the present the textile industry uses more than half of the industrial power supplied in this state by the Georgia Power Company.

"I do not doubt," Mr. Hertwig declared, "that the recent location of several paper companies in the South was partly actuated by the large amount of paper containers, etc., used in the textile industry for the shipping and marketing of goods. I might go through a long list of manufacturers who have recently moved into this section which have proved to be adjuncts to the textile operation."

The speaker declared that this industry was intimately aware of its obligations not only to its stockholders and its employees but also to the communities in which it was situated.

"When we decide to install new machinery or build a community health center or a recreational hall," he added, "we want to do so not as an expedient just for our own benefit, or one which has been compelled by competition. On the contrary, we are determined to do so because of an awareness on our part that such things are the duties of good citizens—that they are a part of our obligations in helping our communities to progress and helping our citizens to become increasingly better citizens."

Proximity Team Wins Over Revolution, 14-6

The Proximity Office "Never Weres" softball team trounced the Revolution "Has Beens" 14-6 in a seven-inning game last Friday night at Central Field. The game was originally scheduled for nine innings but both teams lost the services of so many players that it was impossible to continue the contest. The umpire stopped the game after seven innings and, since the Proximity team was ahead, declared them the winner.

The Revolution team, disturbed about losing the game and determined to get revenge, immediately challenged the "Never Weres" to a return game next year (so they would have time to get into shape).

The Proximity Ofifce team made good use of their prize of a large economy case of rubbing alcohol. There were so many sore legs and arms that no one reported for work Saturday morning.

The teams used five pitchers in the gruelling duel. Proximity used "Fireball" Red Leonard and "Uncle" Jim Marvin, while Revolution used "Casanova" Will Marshburn and the two psychologists from Revolution, Tom Lauderdale and Tommy Ward. Proximity collected 15 hits and Revolution received 11 safeties. Proximity made 32 errors to Revolution's 54.. Aaron Pinkelton knocked the only home run of game in the third inning but as usual the bases were empty.

Will Marshburn was so sore Monday he couldn't bend over to tie his shoes. Mrs. "T" Ward reports that "T" bathed his feet three times after the game. Jack Hughes will be on crutches for weeks after twisting his knee in the fourth inning.

Members of the Proximity team were: Archie Baynes, Edgar Gardner, Jim Marvin, Red Leonard, Richard Sullivan, Monroe Whitt, John McDermott, Raymond Meadows, George "Grapefruit" Nance, Jim Brown, Hamp Wiley and Raymond Smith.

Members of the Revolution team were: Junior Weaver, V. Hinshaw, Aaron Pinkelton, Jack Hughes, Jr., Tom Lauderdale, Will Marshburn, "T" Ward, Fred Ziprik, Howard Pickard, Mac Kinney and Tommy Ward.

Red Cross School To Begin June 8

The Red Cross National Aquatic School for this area will again be held at Camp Carolina, Brevard, N. C., from June 8-18th.

The purpose of this 10-day school is to train instructors in first aid and water safety for representatives of Red Cross Chapters, school systems, industry, youth organizations, adult agencies and organized camps. An all-inclusive fee of $40.00 covers the 10 days of training, board, lodging, texts, insignia and materials used during the courses.

For those interested in Surf Rescue a National Aquatic School is also being conducted at Daytona Beach, Florida, from June 10 to 20. The fee is also $40.00.

Again this year the Red Cross will conduct a Small Craft School. This school will offer knowledge and training in the skilled use of rowboats, canoes, small sailing craft and—for the first time—outboard motors. Students may qualify as Small Craft instructors upon successful completion of the 10 day course.

The School will be conducted at Camp Chickagami, Tennessee, from June 8 to 18. The all-inclusive fee of $40.00 covers board, lodging, texts, insignia and materials used.

Y's Men See Movie

At their regular meeting Tuesday the Proximity Y's Men's Club saw the newest picture released by the International Business Machine Company called, "Piercing the Unknown." Mr. Bob Gates from I. B. M. in Greensboro made a few comments and answered questions about the picture.

"FROM EVERY MOUNTAINSIDE"—Shown here is a scene from the film entitled, "From Every Mountainside," to be shown at the Proximity YMCA Tuesday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m. The film will describe how life insurance protects and serves a typical American family. It will feature a group of well known Hollywood actors. No admission will be charged to see this special movie.

I overheard an Englishman say "Why the audacity of it all."

Regardless of the way some may look at the whole business, I rather like what an editor of the New York World-Telegram had to say in his Coronation Day editorial:

"Skeptics and critics may see in the tradition-steeped coronation ritual merely the trappings of British obstinacy and obsolescence. But to the British, it is the nectar of resurgence, the remedy for weariness and hopelessness, the stimulant for the celebrated British pluck and persistence.

"To Americans, despite their notable aversion for even a token monarchy, the coronation pomp is a fascination. But their avid interest also is evidence of the long and natural affinity of the two nations.

"On this basis, they join with the new Queen's subjects in that ancient and symbolic beseechment: 'God Save the Queen.' For, like it or not, much of the world's future, for generations to come, may depend on the fate of Elizabeth's reign."

Program For Peace In Industry Offered

A 10-point program for industrial peace has been laid before the nation by Charles R. Sligh, Jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Recalling assertions that we have a "businessman's government" today, Mr. Sligh emphasized that "Washington under Eisenhower or anybody else is not going to make employees love their employers so much that they expect less in take-home pay or working conditions."

"We need a platform of principles from which to establish a program—a realistic and workable program, for industrial peace," he said. "Winning the respect and cooperation of our employees is no less of a challenge to us today than it was yesterday. The people are sick of strikes and shutdowns that inconvenience them. They see the economic waste and human misery of strikes, and they want it stopped."

Program Offered

Speaking for American industrial management, Mr. Sligh offered the following 10-plank program:

1. Management and labor have mutual interests that make them dependent upon each other, and what hurts one soon hurts the other.

2. We want to pay high wages—as high as competitive conditions will permit—and we want to give the public lower prices so that we can broaden our markes and produce more abundance for all America.

3. We believe in helping our employees guard themselves against the hazards of life—such as accidents, sickness, untimely death and want in old age. We encourage and help our employees in sound programs to provide fundamental security.

4. We believe in making employment in our plants healthy, safe and satisfying. We believe in programs to cut down accidents and illness both on and off the job. We want our companies to be GOOD places to work.

5. We recognize the psychological and spiritual aspects of work, and want our employees to feel that they belong and that they find satisfaction on their jobs.

6. We unoerstand the desire of our employees for knowledge of the company and we are alert to the need of a two-way communications program so that we may better learn of the needs, the hopes and aspirations of our people.

7. We believe that individual freedom and the right of individual action is the essence of our American heritage. Membership or nonmembership in a labor union should not be a requirement for a job. We oppose coercion in any form—by management or labor.

8. We believe in freedom of speech for employees as well as employers, as long as there is no violation of anyone else's freedom with threats or intimidation.

9. We believe in equal responsibility before the law; that people who sign contracts should live up to them or be subject to legal redress.

10. We believe that industry's primary job is to serve the public and that all of those who work in industry—employers and employees—must put the public interest ahead of their own desires and ambitions.

WORTH TRYING

Sometime when you're fed up
Or just feeling blue,
Lift your heavy head up
See if you can do
Something for some other
One who's feeling bad—
Chances are, dear brother,
You'll forget you're sad!
